Continuing Education in PPS care for doctors, nurses, and therapists
by BALDWIN KEENAN co-editor

Several months ago Joan Headley, of Post-Polio Health International, asked me to come up with some new ideas for We’re Still Here that might be appropriate for participation by Rotary International. Just that week I had listened to the chronic frustration of co-survivors in regards to their not getting care from polio trained caregivers. They had chosen Medicare Advantage HMOs, not for medical reasons but for economic security reasons. As I was thinking of ideas for Joan, it dawned on me that since the majority of So California polio survivors are not going to leave their HMOs, the solution is to train enough doctors in HMOs to take care of the polio population. All medical caregivers require Continuing Education. CME for physicians, CNE for Nurses and CE for Physical Therapists. We should be able, perhaps with the support of Rotary International, to organize a day of PPS training for the professional caregivers of polio survivors.

Slightly over 40% of local readers of Southern California Polio support group newsletters have completed questionnaires identifying their health insurance company, doctor group, and the primary care and specialists who take care of their polio related and other illnesses.

The idea to launch this initiative is an idea many years in the making. Not long after I started coming to Orange County PPS meetings I was approved for Medicare Disability Insurance. Two years later I had to choose between straight Medicare or a Medicare Advantage HMO. Dan Holloway was the devoted husband to a dear, now departed, polio survivor, who befriended me in the early days when the realities of PPS overcame me. Dan urged me to just get on Medicare and not to even buy supplemental insurance. He told me that I would want to have easy access to doctors and physical therapists who had been trained in PPS. He explained that members of our group in HMOs had little success in getting to caregivers who knew about polio and post-polio. He stressed that my health would be worth whatever extra it cost. I am quite willing to drive 20 miles to a neurologist and an orthopedist along with a team of physical and occupational therapists who have years of experience caring for polio survivors. I pay 20% of what Medicare determines to be the cost of an office visit or medical procedure. Office visits cost me about $15. Lab work is usually free. One big expense I was happy to pay was $700, my portion of the $3500 cost of a custom carbon fiber brace. It provides such excellent support and walking thrust that I almost never use crutches anymore and my wheelchair is in storage. The orthotists who make state of the art braces have generally stopped making quality braces for patients who have HMO insurance. The HMO reimbursement is based on “off the shelf” braces. Polio legs and feet don’t usually come in those sizes. Dan Holloway gave me great advice.

The surveys indicates that HMOs work well for some survivors who have been quite successful in getting care from doctors in various HMO contracted medical groups. Some primary care as well as specialist physicians have made the effort to learn PPS. In many instances, Kaiser Permanente, an HMO, has given very good care to polio survivors. Also a few medical groups, as well as Kaiser, have absorbed the cost of sending survivors to Dr. Perlman or Dr. Shanfield, even though they are not members of their medical group. The great majority in our PPS support groups are in Medicare Advantage HMO and complaints about how “impossible” it is to see doctors who knows about polio are common. Medicare Advantage HMOs draw 80% of their customers from Southern Florida and California. They have convinced seniors in these two states that it is worth trading away easy access to specialized medical care (such as for PPS) for the economic security that comes with managed care. Survivors make this decision seriously. PPS may not be our only serious health problem, and many medical groups contracted to HMOs and Kaiser have proven well suited to treat the complex medical problems of seniors.

Some survivors are willing to pay to see PPS specialists out-of-pocket and use their HMO for all their other care -- getting the best of both worlds. Despite our survey showing that survivors on straight Medicare are more satisfied with their PPS care, it is obvious that most of the 38,000 polio survivors in So. California are going to stay with a Medicare Advantage HMO because of their very low out of pocket costs.

Now for the difficult work . . .

We had expected that we could limit our focus to the HMOs most popular with polio survivors. However 8% of survey respondents say that they are not getting care from polio trained doctors and therapists, and yet they are on straight Medicare. Possibly long drives are difficult. It is clear that we need to ensure that we approach doctors, nurses, and therapists from all regions of Southern California.

Kaiser Permanente plays a very strategic role in California health care. In Northern California it co-sponsored a symposium with local survivors on post-polio care. In San Diego, after considerable prodding by survivor Gladys and others, it established its Neuromuscular Respiratory Program, the protocols of which are now in place in the rest of Southern California. Kaiser’s Christine Phan, a physical Medicine and Rehabilitation physician in Downey is in the Post-Polio Health International Directory. And we have been informed by Kaiser management that its primary care doctors are now routinely sending polio survivors to Kaiser neurologists for evaluation if indicated. These accomplishments plus the fact that Kaiser services every region of Southern California give us confidence that it may be willing to sponsor Continuing Medical Education in polio and Post-Polio Syndrome.

Given the spread in returned questionnaires, we also need to approach Blue Cross/Blue Shield, and AARP-United Health Care-Secure Horizons and ask them to be co-sponsors. Unlike Kaiser they do not employ doctors, but contract to medical groups. Most medical groups contract to multiple HMOs. If we are successful with the above mentioned HMOs, we should be able to promote the polio CME training to medical groups throughout Southern California. And of course we will contact each of the physicians and Medical Groups listed in our readers’ survey responses.

Dr. Perlman a Neurologist who directs a polio clinic at UCLA has offered to help teach. We also plan to invite Dr. Carol Vandernakker a Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation physician who directs the polio clinic at UC Davis, Christine Phan a Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation physician at Kaiser, the Post-Polio Clinic team from Rancho Los Amigos and Dr. Stewart Shanfield, an Orthopedist associated with St. Jude Medical Center.

Please keep in mind:

- Even if PPS-CME is a smashing success we will not find a polio doctor in every medical group and near every survivor’s home.
- There will still be times when a survivor who chooses to be in an HMO will have to put up a big fight to get care by a polio trained doctor or therapist or use some of the money saved by being in an HMO to pay for “outside” polio care.
- 1/3 of survivors who responded to the survey choose straight Medicare, Medicare with a supplement, or a Medicare PPO. All three of these options make access to polio caregivers relatively easy. The month to month cost is more than an HMO. But when you factor in the years we live with PPS, are these survivors really paying more? Is it cheaper to see doctors who don’t know polio and are not learning it? Is it cheaper to be instructed in exercise by a Physical Therapist who has never studied PPS? How long will one of us wear an off-the-shelf brace because that is all the HMO will pay for?
- About half of the survey respondents are getting some positive polio care with Kaiser and the other HMOs. Our website will soon list the providers that were named by survey respondents.
- If our Professional Development in care for PPS is successful there will be many more polio caregivers to add to our list.
- Survivor Astrid Gallegher attached this note: “Both my primary care doc and my Pulmnologist sent me to other providers and specialists. In every case I think it is my responsibility to ensure that I get appropriate treatment.”
- Long ago VICTIMS, let’s make Southern California one place where we SURVIVORS take charge of our own health care!

Note on Kaiser Permanente, a different type of HMO:

All other HMOs in Southern California use provider groups to service patients. Kaiser employs its physicians, nurses and therapists directly. It owns its hospitals.
Questions about Medicare options?

California Health Advocates have answers!

- California Health Advocates is the leading Medicare advocacy and education organization in California. It is a non-profit and receives financial support from a broad range of private and public organizations.

- The premiere watchdog organization for Medicare in California: it conducts public policy research to support improved rights and protection of Medicare beneficiaries and their families through HICAP (the Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program).

- Free, one-on-one Medicare counseling. Trained volunteer counselors answer your questions and help you understand your Medicare rights and benefits, including how to appeal denials of coverage; Medicare supplemental insurance (Medigap policies); Medicare Advantage plans; employee and retiree coverage; and long-term care insurance.

- Legal help and representation at Medicare appeals or administrative hearings are also available.

- HICAP provides free educational presentations on Medicare and related topics. Call your local HICAP to schedule a presentation or find out about one happening in your area.

- HICAP counselors do not sell, recommend, or endorse any insurance product, agent, insurance company, or health plan.

EDITOR NOTE:
I read Richard’s book in two sittings. I’ve read several polio survivor biographies. None like this. I was five and not too much hampered by a skinny hooked left leg when the virus hit Richard. He brought me inside the iron lung and he took over my vision so that I could see the disease and PPS like I never had before. My eyes had to adjust to his world.

Baldwin Keenan

“Not Just Polio” recounts the remarkably full and enjoyable life of the author, Richard Lloyd Daggett. The narrative includes an honest and frank account of living with a significant disability. More than the story of a devastating illness, it also chronicles the life of a young person growing up in middle class America during the 1940s and 50s.

His ability to attain the equivalence of a college education, despite being physically unable to enter the classroom, is a subtle but strong display of his strength. The vision and determination which became evident during this long challenge were, without a doubt, significant elements which enhanced his effectiveness as an advocate to improve the welfare, comfort, and safety of severely disabled patients who lacked adequate resources.
